Facebook Announcement of The Baseball Tavern closure.

The Baseball Tavern

Published by Joao Quintino [?] · December 12 at 12:35 PM ·

It is with a heavy heart that we announce the soon closure of The Baseball Tavern. Since 1963, we have been a Fenway tradition, serving up fun, smiles, and cold beer to our loyal customers. It has been a fantastic journey and wouldn't have been possible without the support of our family, loyal customers, friends, and dedicated employees.

We are very grateful to everyone who has supported us over the years.

We wish you all the best life has to offer, and please stay tuned for future developments. Goodbyes are not forever!

A Curriculum That Works for You

Customized Skills
for a Complex World

As a professional school, Fletcher offers a flexible curriculum oriented toward practical problem solving. You will have ample opportunity to deepen your existing skills and, through our interdisciplinary curriculum, you will develop new critical analytical skills, underpinned by historical, technical, and cultural knowledge.

Fletcher's three divisions ensure a multidisciplinary grounding in international affairs. You'll also delve into your interests through Fletcher's 34 Fields of Study. The Fletcher curriculum helps you develop a professional profile that matches your passions and aspirations, and prepares you to thrive in a complex world.

"I like Fletcher's 360-degree approach to solving problems. Instead of bringing a single perspective to an issue, the Fletcher experience encourages me to think about different, and sometimes unexpected, angles."

A Community for Life

Welcome to the Fletcher Family

At Fletcher, you don't just earn a degree—you join a close-knit community that supports your goals for a lifetime. Being part of the Fletcher community pays dividends during your time at Fletcher and beyond, leading to professional opportunities and enduring personal connections. The Fletcher family is a global network of more than 9,300 committed, collaborative, and confident students and alumni who are there to support you.

The Fletcher experience is based on a diverse and inclusive community, which is essential to preparing leaders with a global perspective. With over 70 citizenships, Fletcher students represent a wide range of personal, professional, and academic backgrounds.

Our students and faculty foster an enriching environment characterized by candid discussion with a wealth of perspectives. Members of our community strive to be active and responsible global citizens.

"Everyone is so eager to learn about each other's story. Because we all come from different parts of the world, the diversity of thought, culture, language, and experience enriches our time at Fletcher."

Laurance Cosper
MALD 2016, United States

"I love Fletcher because of its openness to different viewpoints and its commitment to internationalism. Faculty and staff are aware that our students who come from all over the world are our most prized change. All of us at Fletcher are exposed to diverse cultures on a daily basis and are better teachers and people for it."

Autism and Epilepsy Research at Tufts University School of Medicine

Every day, the neuroscientists at Tufts School of Medicine in Boston are working diligently in their labs to improve the quality of life for children and adults with autism and epilepsy worldwide. Our expertise — combined with the benefit of sophisticated in-house technologies — is revealing previously unknown and complex mechanisms in the brain that give rise to autism and epilepsy. This is leading us toward knowing how we can block those mechanisms.

By identifying the pathways of autism and epilepsy, and the precise communication occurring cell-to-cell in these disorders, Tufts is playing a key role in identifying “targets” for improved early diagnostics and effective treatments. Our collaboration with leading pharmaceutical partners is fast-tracking our discoveries in the lab to create new therapies and diagnostics.

Central to our success and progress, we are pioneers in the study of a type of brain cell called glia that was only recently discovered to be involved in autism and epilepsy — and that holds untapped promise for new treatments and interventions. We have also discovered that glia cells are involved in sleep and mood disorders, which often occur alongside autism.

In addition to glial cells, we are studying a chemical transmitter called GABA that is involved in mediating aspects of autism. This has the potential to lay the ground-breaking work required for the development of new drugs to treat the disorder.

Earlier diagnostics is another goal at Tufts — we have discovered that a protein called APC is essential to successful synapse connection between neurons and the disruption of that protein results in learning deficits, autism, and epilepsy.

These are just a few examples of the discoveries happening at Tufts that should give families who are affected by autism and epilepsy hope for new answers.

Leadership

Philip Haydon, PhD
Chair of the Department of Neuroscience at Tufts University School of Medicine and president and co-founder of the Tufts spin-off, GliaCure. He received his formal training in the United Kingdom at the University of Leeds in the Department of Physiology before moving to the U.S. in 1982 for his postdoctoral studies.

In 1994, his laboratory made a seminal discovery in the function of a type of brain cell called astrocytes, revealing an entirely new set of targets for neurological and neuropsychiatric interventions. He is recipient of a McKnight Investigator Award and the Jacob Javits Award from the National Institutes of Neurological Disorders and Stroke.

He has also served as director of two NIH-funded centers: the Center for Dynamic Imaging of Nervous System Function and the Silvio O. Conte Center for Integration at the Tripartite Synapse. He has trained more than 30 graduate and postdoctoral trainees and has published more than 100 manuscripts and texts.

DEVELOPING BUSINESS SKILLS WITH CONTEXTUAL INTELLIGENCE

Master of International Business

You may be interested in international affairs and the role of business in solving problems on the global stage. You may be looking to attend business school, but want a truly international take on the traditional MBA curriculum.

You may be considering a dual degree that combines hard skills with your passion for complex international issues, and the contextual intelligence that comes with bringing those two together. Then the MIB may be for you.

The MIB is a hybrid degree that offers students classes in business, law, economics, policy and regional studies. Numerous fields of study and opportunities for experiential learning allow students to tailor the program to their interests and career goals.
